

7. Pressing Matters

The First Amendment

When Trump swept to power in the fall of 2016 (a time of great rejoicing amongst all right thinking people) he decided that upon his inauguration that there was one thing that he was determined to make abundantly clear. His was to be a ‘healing’ presidency. The days of division, the spreading of hatred and the culture of lying, obfuscation and misdirection that had characterised the Kenyan Obama administration would now be reversed.

Above all, Trump was determined that from now on the freedom of the press would be respected. It would be a top priority, foremost amongst his concerns. This was to be a First Amendment Presidency! Gone and banished would be the dark days that Obama had wrought with his Stasi like approach to press freedoms!

The Cunning Fox

If Trump knew one thing, it was that regulations and standards were a cancer, a poison that was corrupting and killing America. Fortunately, Trump had had the foresight to appoint Scott Pruitt (a leading environmentalist) to head up the Environmental Protection Agency, so as to sweep away all the corrosive regulations that were so afflicting the US with their toxic regulatory carcinogens. This left Trump free to get rid of standards so that he could make America Great Again.

To Trump’s surprise, and delight, a few brave news agencies, tentatively at first, and then bravely, emboldened by Trump’s display of courageous opposition to standards, at last felt free to speak out. At last Fox News would be allowed to operate freely, with a free reign, to spread the truth of freedom, in a frisson of reports, freely critical of big Government and regulations, without being hampered by so-called “journalistic standards” and regulations...

Fix News Summary (A celebration of the life and works of Sean Hannity)

The Fox commentator known as Sean Hannity
Was famed for his ridiculous inanity
Intellectual dishonesty
And complete lack of modesty
Insane ego, stupidity and vanity

The Faux News Daily Sketch ... or giving (it out) is better than receiving (Lines penned in sheer disgust at Jim Carrey’s hurtful cartoon of Sarah Huckabee Sanders)

It is well known that the cartoonist’s craft
Is with sycophantic flattery to draft
And never with cartoon
To lampoon a buffoon,
Or hypocrite ... or to tempt us to laugh

At last there was a government for the people - but there also had to be a free press for the people! Trump knew that in order to give the free press a free reign, and to break through the clouds of censorship, that certain restrictions would have to be relaxed. Trump with his reformist agenda was well placed to do this...

First, Trump needed to ‘relax’ the ability of CNN, MSNBC, and the rest of the biased fake news media, to criticise the office of the Presidency. Not Trump, himself, of course (as far as Trump was concerned the press could criticise him as much as they wanted, Trump loved criticism - he was the most introspective President in US history). However, Trump did have concern and empathy for those Presidents who would have to follow in his footsteps (they would have incredibly big shoes to fill).

Indeed, Trump’s ability to absorb any amount of criticism, without ever becoming ruffled or upset in any way, was one of his best qualities. He simply batted criticism away with a little joke, always in a self-deprecating manner and usually through Twitter (a medium he cared little for but engaged with for the sake of democracy). But he never ignored criticism – he always wanted to learn from his mistakes. This was one of his weaknesses; it was sheer hubris for him to imagine that he had any mistakes to learn from. All great leaders have their weaknesses but, fortunately for Trump, his greatest weaknesses were also his greatest strengths!

Freedom of Speech

Having now prevented CNN, MSNBC, PBS and other Liberal broadcasters from subverting free speech with their tactics of asking pernicious and inappropriate questions during press briefings and also of using anonymous sources (contrary to International Law, UN regulations, common sense and evangelical preachments), Trump now carefully implemented phase 2 of his vital press freedoms.

Hannity and Fox News (the sirens of American Freedom) were now free to tell the American public the truth without the harassment of so-called ‘fact-checkers’ who had by now (quite rightly) been deported to Guantanamo Bay (Executive Order 34557).

In addition, other purveyors of truth and justice were now able to emerge from the shadows. Sinclair’s local radio would ensure that no home in the land was free from the truth as it applied to local matters. Breitbart would be free to provide in-depth analysis in its trademark impartial, bi-partisan way (twenty four hours a day, seven days a week on national television) via PBS and Alex Jones, of Info-Peace, was now free to deliver his independent, unbiased commentaries on ABC and CBS thanks to the ‘clean airwaves act’ brought forth by Trump and passed into law by a Republican dominated Congress (there was even some sensible bipartisan support from a few southern Democrats).

It was a shame that CNN and MSNBC (a once great broadcaster of the noughties that had broadcast great shows such as ‘The Apprentice’) had now been forced into decline, but the price of democratic progress is that outdated news organisations and broadcasters must wither and die so that new shoots of press freedom can grow... allowing some of the best journalistic organisations (Fox News) and talent (Tomi Lahren) ever known in the history of the world to flourish ...

Tucker - The Limerick (Challenge edition)

An asshole by the name Carlson Tucker
Oft liked to give Conservative succour
With softball questions - free passes
Whilst kissing their asses
As his own slowly, surely would pucker

The challenge? Avoiding the obvious. But it can’t be resisted indefinitely ...

Riled Up and Fury - Us!

There once was a fellow O'Reilly,
Who did not express himself shyly,
He became an embarrassment,
Due to some alleged harassment,
Perhaps it may yet go to Trially.

O'Reilly on Drugs

O'Reilly said "You know cocaine,
I'm not trying to be profane,
It's not 'cos you are black,
This journalistic hack,
Has lost the best part of his brain

Flirty O'Reilly (Prequel to the Trially of O'Reilly)

O'Reilly said "it's my no spin zone,
But I ain't keen on bein' alone,
So come unto me,
And sit on my knee,
What's in my pocket? Just my cell phone"

Tango Romeo Uniform Mike Papa - Foxtrot Oscar (aka Phonetic Apologetics)

He's so Cunning when he is on Fox
With his stunning and populist vox
For the Fox he's so sly
That Steve Doocy will cry
"Just stop running your mouth till it shocks"

But still Trump was jumping through hoops,
To splutter out alphabet soup

Sierra Sierra
Spelling out, all his words, in a group

Oh, and he got a nice reply too...

Horrible and One Sided (aka Fox News)

Trump said "there's more than one side to me"
Ask Hannity if you don't agree"
But there was no dissent
For we knew what he meant
There's both lying and hypocrisy

For that is Trump's mass appeal
It's all in the "Art of the deal"
He breaks rules of course
Whilst trying to endorse
Policies that are simply surreal

The first was that old travel ban
And then there was stiffing Iran
With some odd rhetoric
And his weird Bolton dick
To give his base meat was his plan

Fake News (aka Fox)

Some things are surely quite noxious
Like news - obviously Foxious
But who are most vile?
Those full of denial...
Are often the most obnoxious!

The fallacious (or is that fellatious) Piers Morgan – Trump's Daily Male (aka The suppository of news)

The Mail Online is the mouthpiece of Morgan
And Piers loves to polish up his old organ
So he facilitates Trump
By brown nosing Don's rump
To get dirt off - even more than a whore can

Sean Hannity – Serious Journalist - Gives Donald Trump a Rough Ride

According to Mr. Sean Hannity
Don is full on masculine man-ity
And his sexual prowess
Comes with such sweet caress
Sean screams with ecstatic profanity

Sean's desire to feel Don's largesse
In his ruffled state of undress
With his hair in a tousle
His state of arousal
Is far too intense to repress

Google Dearth (aka Searching for the Spooft)

Donald Trump is feeling bereft
He thinks Google favours the left
He's not good on their list
Therefore they're socialist
And stealing his glory - it's theft

It's not that he's being narcissistic
He just wants to look up a statistic
As he types his own name
The search engine's to blame
When the response returned is "fascistic"

National Enquirer - The "Facts" Pecker

Pecker has got dirt on Trump
Trump's got dirt on his pecker
What do they both have in common?
Neither can check a fact checker!

Trump's Enquiry - Why no Pulitzer Prize for the National Enquirer

"For the Enquirer - no Pulitzer Prize?"
Enquired Trump, "like me, they never lies!
Just like me when I tweet
It's a literary treat
And I'm sure you get one with free fries"

With press freedom now guaranteed by rights that would surely last a thousand years (a thousand year's rights) the first amendment had been taken care of. Once and for all – another triumph for Trump, whose policies were so reformist that even the most ardent of his progressive opponents were now starting to rally behind him, and he had become so popular with the female voters that the newly free press even started to call him 'Her Trump'.
